You’ve Got This!, Find Your Courage. Stop Playing Safe. Brave. Make Your Mark. The titles of Margie’s bestselling books reflect her passion for empowering people to live and lead with greater courage.

Margie’s had to find her courage many times since growing up, one of seven children, on a dairy farm in rural Australia. Personal adversity, backpacking solo around the world, starting a business with four young children: all have taught her valuable lessons on defying doubt, building resilience and embracing change.

Drawing on her background in Fortune 500 business, coaching and psychology, Margie brings a deeply grounded and practical approach to equipping people with the mindset, strategies and skills to unlock the potential in themselves and others.

A PhD candidate completing her doctoral studies on the interplay of power, leadership and gender, Margie is a member of the Advisory Board of Forbes School of Business & Technology and is a sought-after keynote speaker and lecturer including at Columbia, Georgetown and her alma mater, Monash University in Australia.

Described by the Wall Street Journal as a ‘global leadership authority who gets to the heart of what holds people back,’ Margie’s insights have been shaped by her work and interviews with leaders such as Richard Branson, Bill Marriott, Steve Forbes, Oliver Stone and author Marianne Williamson. Margie has also co-authored two books with Stephen Covey, Jack Canfield and Ken Blanchard.

In 2010, Margie founded Global Courage to embolden braver, more inclusive leadership and improve diversity at decision-making tables. Margie is a Women’s Economic Forum honoree and Ambassador for Women in Global Business.

Margie has taken the path less travelled many times, living in multiple countries and cultures from Papua New Guinea and Singapore to Washington D.C. An intrepid spirit, she’s crossed the Sahara Desert, stayed in Palestinian refugee camps, hiked the Inca trail, swam with piranhas in the Amazon and cycled across Beijing.

Last but not least, Margie is the mother of four children. She enjoys sharing adventures with them and her husband—most recently, summiting Mt Kilimanjaro.
